

Looking at a Production Line

Some years ago the respected Comrade Kim Jong Un was looking round the shoe-making line of a footwear factory.

An official of the factory told him that they were saving much electricity by introducing sci-tech achievements into the line.

On hearing him out, Kim Jong Un asked if they were saving electricity only on that line.

At that time, the factory improved the adhesion strength of shoes far better than before, while saving electricity at all the drying kilns on the flowline of the shoe-making workshop.

After learning about it in detail, he spoke highly of them, valuing the sincerity of the officials and employees of the factory, who were thinking first of their country and working hard to make more wonderful shoes for the people.
