One July day in 2015, the respected Comrade Kim Jong Un visited a small factory which produces consumer goods.

The officials of the factory were surprised to see him entering the compound of their factory in spite of heavy rain.

They had never expected him to visit their factory, as he was busy with his work of leading the general march to glorify the 70th anniversary of the founding of the Workers' Party of Korea as a revolutionary, auspicious event.

While looking round the factory he underscored the need to make good designs of packaging and brands and gave detailed instructions about its production, including the issue of adjusting the amount of glue to be applied to the products.

Praising the factory for producing quality goods, he said he was very pleased whenever he received favourable comments of the people on them.

That day, he earnestly asked its officials to lend an ear to the public demands whenever they got good feedback on their products.
