

A Matter of Greatest Importance

On July 6, 1994, President Kim Il Sung held a consultative meeting of senior officials in the economic sector and specified the ways and means to frustrate the vicious economic blockade by the imperialists and improve the people's living standards.

Suddenly, he asked an official about the production of school uniforms.

When told that all kindergarteners and schoolchildren had been provided with new clothes, he wore a broad smile on his face, as if he felt relieved of all worries.

No such a leader of the country could be found in the world as President Kim Il Sung who cared much for the issue of supplying uniforms to the pupils even at the meeting of discussing the orientation and ways for economic development of the country.

But the participants never dreamed that it would be the last meeting held in his presence.

As seen above, the President ensured that the government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea set it as its eternal policy to provide all children across the country with uniforms for the first time in the world and paid much attention to their production until the last moment of his life.
