

To Build a Perfect Riding Club

The following happened when the respected Comrade Kim Jong Un visited the Mirim Riding Club.

After feasting his eyes on the spectacular scenery of the club, including the buildings beside sand and turf tracks and stone-covered roads, he said it would be advisable to dig ditches between the turf track and roads as rainwater would flow into the turf track when it pours down in the rainy season.

Pointing at the roof of the outdoor stand, he reiterated the need to take measures to prevent raindrops falling from the eaves of buildings from flowing into the tracks.

As seen above, he paid close attention to making the club perfect as a modern riding service base.
